

ABSTRACT

Disclosed is a ROM device with a repair function where defective cells are repaired by a bit cell unit. The defective cells are repaired using a ground or operating (e.g., a supply) voltage line incorporated in the ROM device. This allows the defective cells to be repaired without separate redundant cells. After repairing, a test operation for replaced cells is not needed.